undergrowth.org

Undergrowth is a non-profit, grassroots collective that welcomes like-minded artists to a common ground in which to publish, network and spread the seeds of cultural evolution...

Undergrowth publishes an online and print magazine containing the best short fiction, journalism, poetry, visual art, photography, comics and esoterica from Australia's counter-cultural underground. Undergrowth also hosts an e-book library of emerging and established authors in downloadable PDF form, on-line art galleries of contributing artists, music videos, spoken word and audio interviews available as podcasts, video documentary clips, 'nu media' and animations, community forums and Nomadology, featuring traveller's blogs examining the world around us.

The term 'counter-culture' may seem a bit outdated to today's distributed, autonomous networks of memetic revolutionaries, jaded activists and serotonin junkies. Call us what you will – we all face the same savvy military-corporate world which has had plenty of experience dealing with alternative views. Dissent is quickly repackaged as safe consumer rebellion. But in response to almost total media domination we have learned to become media ourselves: culture-jammers, hackers, crackers, artists, dreamers all fighting for our place in the sun and with our own stories to tell.

The Nomadology project

e-books

As we move away from the concrete metaphor of the 'Underground' to the more organic term 'UNDERGROWTH', we provide a canvas for stories about the real world as it rapidly becomes science fiction and fiction itself blossoms into genres not yet labelled. And as planetary monoculture is enforced from above, thousands of counter-cultures are also sprouting from below, in organic networks that sustain and build a sense of community and unity in diversity. Powered by new technologies and an archaic revival of thought, a balance is being struck between the past and the future that may be our best hope for survival.

From the gypsy circuits of festival culture to global horizons via airplane, the Nomadology project, an online blogging journal, tells the story of hitchhikers catching the wind on the open road and adventurers recording stories and learning about the land around them.
